Partners for Andean Community Health invites you to travel with us and participate in our Volun-tour trip to Andean Ecuador scheduled from April 13-19. Trip highlights include providing direct medical care to the local population in need; visiting indigenous communities; experiencing native culture and cuisine; exploring a near-by, active volcano; and exploring the Ecuadorian Cloud Forest. This trip is an excellent opportunity for students, adults, retirees, and families alike.

PACH's mission is to provide resources and enduring solutions, along with global partners, to improve Andean community health. PACH strives to improve access to healthcare and community services for the people of the Andes. Our innovate approach ensures effective continuums of care in high-impact program areas. We focus on healthcare accessibility and affordability for vulnerable communities in Ecuador through empowering our local partners and leveraging the expertise, motivation, and resources of international volunteers. We promote a culture of wellbeing, disease prevention, and cultural diversity. We are a 501c3 not for profit charitable organization.

In collaboration with our in-country clinical partner, FIBSUPAM, PACH invites you to join a seven day volunteer experience that helps us care for Ecuadorian communities in need and offers valuable cultural and educational experience to participants.

This trip is specifically geared towards families with elementary and middle school-aged children. Examples of volunteer tasks include: assisting in administering patient eye chart exams, taking patient heights and weights, teaching children how to brush their teeth, interacting with and supporting families during the patient intake process, and providing support with neighboring schools projects.

Please note that parents or a specially designated adult are expected to participate in the trip with their children.
